

River

River, how you flow from your source below
Rushing by, passing me on your journey to the sea.
River, how you wind down a path that you designed
And you know where it leads as you flow, you are free.

Say goodbye to the streams you were weaving
As you greet weirs and waterfalls.
Say farewell to the land you are leaving
Your power grows as the ocean calls.

River, how you run 'neath the shining sun
Giving life to a blend of aquatic friends.
River, how you race at a gathering pace
Filling up with the rain as you meet again.

Say so long to the hills you descended
As you push past the fields and farms.
Don't look back at the time you've expended
Your future waits in the ocean's arms.

River, how you glide by your banks so wide
Forcing your energy to your home in the sea.

River, how you flow
River, how you run
River, how you wind
River, how you glide
River.
